Legal regulations

The medical supplies, which are compulsory by law on board of ships, depend on the flag of the ship, the waters, the crew size and the cargo.

Through the contacts of the pharmacy with legislative / supervising authorities in various countries, the pharmacy always keep up to date with the official regulations for the medical supplies on board.

Stocklist

When your ship doesn't have a complete stocklist, or one that isn't properly regulated, then an empty stocklist will be sent to you. You can fill in this list yourself and then send it back to the pharmacy, so your data can be processed.

You can fill in this list and periodically send this to the Regenboog Apotheek. The advanced computer system of the pharmacy keeps up when your medical supplies expire. Then an offer will be made, based on the expired medical supplies and the supplies that are out of stock. After order confirmation, your medical supplies will be sent to you worldwide. On a yearly basis, a new certificate will be created, which will be sent with your order to you. The stocklist will be sent on paper, USB-stick and through email. So you always have a checklist of your medical stock.

Translating-computer-program

The pharmacy is able to label all the medicines in 2 languages, ie. the language of the flag under which the ship sails, aided by our translating-computer-program. The directions for the use of the medicines are available in 7 languages. Therefore the crew can read the directions for use and the application of the medicine. All the medicines are provided with the expiry date and the legal codenumber.
